Two UST environmental programs co-sponsor touring national wildlife photography exhibit

The Environmental Studies and Environmental Science programs are co-sponsoring a touring national wildlife photography exhibit, "Irreplaceable: Wildlife in a Warming World," showing through Sunday, Nov. 30.

The exhibit by leading wildlife photographers, showing at the Water and Oil Gallery, 506 Kenny Road, in the Dayton's Bluff area of St. Paul, is a partnership of faith, science, art and justice groups, united in an effort to educate the public about protecting plants and animals imperiled by climate change.

The exhibit is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday (closed on Thanksgiving).

An online photo gallery, brief video, additional information and action items are available at the exhibit's Web site.
